

Government Contracting Weekly Announces New Contributing Editor

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Chantilly, VA., February 3, 2014- Government Contracting Weekly \(GCW\) is proud to announce that Kristina Tanasichuk, Founder and CEO of the Government Technology & Services Coalition \(GTSC\), has joined the television program as its first Contributing Editor. Tanasichuk will work with GCW as its editor of homeland and national security to cover challenges and opportunities in the Federal market.

“We have been working with Kristina on a number of initiatives and programs and find her insight and reach in the community to be an incredible asset to Government Contracting Weekly. She is fiercely committed to the homeland and national security mission and works tirelessly to assure that our government partners receive the best the contracting community can offer,” said Jim McCarthy, Principal Owner of AOC Key Solutions and host of Government Contracting Weekly.

Government Contracting Weekly premiered in September, 2013, and has received widespread critical acclaim from the government contracting community. Over 125 senior executives from government and industry have made appearances to provide unique domain knowledge and expertise regarding the keys to winning government contracts.

“As the CEO of GTSC and President of Women in Homeland Security, Kristina has a unique and diverse view of the contracting world that can significantly enrich the content of our programming. She has worked with government and industry on everything from mentoring and capacity building to policy and insight into mission. We’re excited to have her contribute that perspective to the substance of our program,” added Richard Nathan, CEO, AOC Key Solutions.

“I am honored and proud to work with Government Contracting Weekly to bring the latest challenges and opportunities that those faced with the mission of homeland and national security face on both policy and execution.” Said Tanasichuk, “I look forward to helping the show expand its audience through substantive and valuable programming with information that helps the contracting community understand the government mission and our government partners understand the contractors’ perspective.”
